The program works for innovating teaching practices to attain its mission of being committed to excellence in legal education, research and training, use of contemporary participant-centric pedagogies and teaching methods also establishing a presence in emerging segments of legal training.

1. Language, Law & Legal profession ::

Human survival depends heavily on communication. It aids in the development of interpersonal interactions and the dissemination of information and knowledge. As a result, the value of effective communication in our daily lives cannot be overstated. Communication serves five major goals: informing, expressing feelings, imagining, influencing, and meeting social expectations. Each of these goals is reflected in the form of communication. Having strong command over the various nuances of language, inclusive of voice inflections, pitch, intonation etc. helps in all aspects of life, from people's professional lives to the transition to their personal lives, and everything that falls in between. All life transactions result from communication.

Ms. Radhika Vats, Assistant Professor, Lloyd Law College

2. Teacher Personifies Society

Personality development is about building one's capacities, nurturing talent, enhancing new skill sets, working on one's weaknesses, and transforming them into strengths. Everyone has distinct skill sets as an individual. Our potential is multifaceted, and investing in personality development allows us to capitalize on our assets. Individual personality development strengthens our abilities and helps our dreams and aspirations become a reality. For those who want to advance in a role or improve their skills and talents while in that role, personal development is crucial. Personal development has been utilized extensively to advance professions, but it is also used to hone life skills and motivate people to work toward their objectives, whether they be expanding their networks outside of the workplace or applying for new jobs.

Dr. Shrikant Juneja, Associate Trainer, Lloyd Law College

Ms. Damini Yadav, Associate Trainer, Lloyd Law College

3. Teaching Pedagogy & Research Methodology

A teaching strategy known as pedagogy involves professors instructing students both in theory and in practice. Pedagogy is influenced by educators' teaching philosophies and includes their knowledge of cultural differences and various learning styles. In order to consolidate earlier knowledge, it is crucial for students to create meaningful classroom relationships. Pedagogy in education can be defined as a teacher's comprehension of how students learn. The lecturers are concentrated on providing the pupils with a syllabus that is pertinent to their needs. Pedagogy requires teacher-student interactions in the classroom that have a profound effect on the learner's mind.

A Research Methodology is a means to describe how a researcher plans to conduct their investigation. It is a rational, methodical approach to a study issue. A methodology explains how a researcher will conduct the study in order to produce accurate, legitimate data that meet their goals and objectives. It includes the data they will gather, where they will get it, how they will gather it, and how they will analyze it. A research methodology lends credibility to research and produces scientifically sound results. It also includes a detailed plan that assists researchers in staying on track, making the process smooth, effective, and manageable. The methodology of a researcher allows the reader to understand the approach and methods used to reach conclusions.
