Law is a profession that caters to various career options. A successful law student can become a practicing lawyer, a corporate leader, an academician, a legal entrepreneur or even a respectable judge. Judiciary is one of the charms of doing law still prevalent in almost all the law schools. Lloyd Law College caters to the interest of all its students and provides an opportunity to all of them to hone their skills. In furtherance of this, the college hosted a guest lecture on an insight into the preparation of Judicial services. Lloyd Law College also runs a specialized cell which helps the students of Lloyd to prepare for Judiciary exams.

The lecture was hosted by Mr. Alok Kumar Ranjan. He is the director of Ambition Law Institute Delhi.

For preparation of judicial services, Mr. Ranjan recommended that the students should be meticulous in their approach in the sense that past papers should be referred which definitely makes their task easier. He made the observation that students who prepare for the judicial services or any other competitive examination make their learning very uninteresting by compelling themselves to read what they are not supposed to study. So he recommended that they should focus on the important issues and the real syllabus. And for that, the best guide is the past papers of the examination. He told them to adopt a smart study approach rather than a bookish approach and a memorizing approach. He gave a suggestion that they should be equally smart in their study and preparation as they should be in their presentation.

The students found the accurate direction to focus on studies. They got the right direction to channelize their time and do effective study. By the end of the lecture, the college had many more aspiring judges sitting among us.
